FUNDRAISER TO HELP PAY MOUNTING MEDICAL BILLS

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN NEWS STAFE WRITER

SOUTHBRIDGE — Southbridge resident Dawn Cipro is thankful for the community she lives in.

"I'm not surprised that the community has shown us this much support. People are very generous and kind. People want to help. Giving them an outlet to be able to help is all people really need. It's very rare that you find people that just don't care. This fundraiser is helpful for Aislen and for us. But it also raises awareness about a multitude of things," Cipro said. On Sunday, May 31, at the Elk's Club on Mill Street, in Worcester, from 1 to 7 p.m., there will be a fundraiser for her daughter, "A Day of Love and Magic for Aislen Cipro." Tickets are $20. The money raised at the event will go towards medical bills that have been accumulating over the years for Aislen's care.

"A Day Of Love and Magic" will have food provided by B.T. Smokehouse, three bands — The Incredible Jon Short, SLUGGO and The Secret Sage and raffles. Ms. Massachusetts will

DCEF GRANTS PROVIDE FOR LOCAL SCHOOLS

CHARLTON — Earlier this month, the Dudley-Charlton Education Foundation (DCEF) gave out $40,000 in grants to teachers and teams at Dudley and Charlton Public Schools towards programs that would normally not be covered by the district's budget.

The programs are varied — from extra laptops in the classroom to bringing a musical group to the school to teach children about African culture but they all must benefit the school and be educationally enriching.

Joshua Evans is a member of the Grant Subcommittee of Dudley-Charlton the Education Foundation. He said the idea of the annual grants is to create an opportunity for teachers to provide an experience for their students that goes beyond the means of the often very limited budget. The programs must improve the learning experience for the students and cost $5,000 or less to fund "A lot of these things help the educators connect better with their students," said Evans. BALLROOM EVENT TRANSPORTS RESIDENTS TO CIVIL WAR ERA

CHARLTON — The sounds of Victorian music filled the room, echoing off of the 150-year-old walls. Women in big hoop dresses and elbow-length white gloves spun around, hypnotizing the onlookers.

It was a whirl of color and chivalry when the Small Planet Dancers came to Rider Tavern on Monday, May 11. The second annual Civil War Ballroom was back, as well as the Victorian Quadrille Orchestra, present-ed by the Historical Society and funded by a grant from the Charlton Cultural Council. For the second year in a row, Small Planet Dancers performed waltzes that would have been danced in the exact same room 150 years before them.

CHARLTON Sturbridge Lions Club's inaugural Golf Tournament will come to the Heritage Country Club in Charlton on Sunday, May 31 at 1 p.m. Participants pay $100 for 18 holes, a golf cart, prizes, raffles and a steak dinner. All proceeds raised at the golf tournament will be going back into the community.

The Sturbridge Lions Club has many fundraisers throughout the year, but Vice President Mark Soraci felt that something was missing. With so many golfers in the Lions Club and within the community, Soraci felt it was time to bring the golf tournament back after a 10-year hiatus.

DEBLOIS AMAZES AT WOMAN'S CLUB LUNCHEON

Vocalist and pianist Tony DeBlois with his mother and manager, Janice. He dedicated the song "Wind Beneath My Wings" to her during his performance.

Tony DeBlois' favorite part of performing is knowing that people are entertained and tapping their feet.

BY OLIVIA RICHMAN NEWS STAFF WRITER

SOUTHBRIDGE — There was something special about the Southbridge Woman's Club annual luncheon this year.

On Friday, May 15, members and their guests gathered at the Southbridge Hotel & Conference Center to listen to vocalist and pianist Anthony "Tony" DeBlois, a well-known performer from Randolph.

DeBlois has autism. He's also blind. He has savant syndrome. The 41-yearold knows more than 10,000 songs on the keyboard and he only has to hear them once. DeBlois can play jazz, country, rock and roll, western, Sinatra, Gershwin and classical. His eighth studio album is called "G is For Gerswhin."

"I like the excitement of the crowd and the audience. They are excited when I'm playing. They sit and dance. They'll tap their toes," said DeBlois. "Our message is that it's OK to be different, believe in yourself, don't give on your dreams and have high hopes. And the three most important words are 'practice, practice, practice." Before getting up on stage, DeBlois ate lunch with the Southbridge Woman's Club. President Peggy Gendreau said it was awesome to have him there. She was surprised she had never heard of him. Strawberry shortcake was DeBlois' favorite part of the meal. He enjoyed getting to eat dessert before performing. He shared that he lost 100 pounds recently by walking with his mother, Janice. It's clear that DeBlois truly lived his message to never give up on your dreams and have high hopes.

DeBlois was a preemie. Doctors told Janice to make a choice of letting him live or die. At 2 years old, he was not sitting upright. With a background in special education, Janice took the legs off of a keyboard and placed it on the floor in hopes of giving him a reason to sit up.

"The first six weeks he was abso-lutely horrible," she recalls. "He was hitting every combination of notes together there was. When he was 2 1/2years old, my husband and I watched "Laurence of Arabia" on television. Six weeks later, I heard the theme song coming from his room. I thought my husband left the record player on, but it was Tony!'

DeBlois didn't have conversational speech until he attended the Berkley College of Music, where he graduated magna cum laude. To show that he understood music theory, the professors asked him questions in such a way that he could play the answer on his keyboard.

DeBlois has had books written about him, seven poems written about him and songs written about him. The 1997 CBS Movie Of the Week "Journey of the Heart" was about him. He's performed all around the world, including Canada, Nigeria, Ireland, Taiwan and Singapore. His favorite was the Bartovan Opera House in Pookeepsi, N.Y.

"I love it. I love traveling and doing shows," said DeBlois. "They're exciting. My mom is also my business manager and producer. She travels with me. She also does the sound equipment. I like it. I really like it."

Besides music DeBlois also loves being adventurous, said Janice. The two just came back from zip-lining in Cancun. They swam in an underground cavern. For someone who was told they may not live, it seems that DeBlois is living life to the fullest every day. When the performance began at the Southbridge Hotel & Conference Center the audience was astounded. President Gendreau requested "Sentimental Journey." Playing a mixture of requests, a song dedicated to his mom, popular oldies and classics and even an original song written about him, the crowd clapped and sang along.

"I tell people to keep their thinking caps on so they can think of some of their favorite songs they want to hear," said DeBlois. "Jazz is my favorite because I like to play different styles - the old and new styles. I like bringing back memories.'

All aboard! Center of Hope sends off 65 to Boston rally

SOUTHBRIDGE — Loud music and cheering could be heard up and down Main Street on Saturday, May 16. As cars drove by they could see a large group of people waving flags and dancing in front of Savers Bank. This was the send off event for "All Aboard the Arc," a statewide awareness campaign and event that focuses public attention on the abilities and needs of people with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

As one of the 18 Massachusetts chapters, the Center of Hope took a large bus to Boston to attend the celebration at 11:15 a.m. One of the headlining speakers was Lauren Potter, an actress on the famous television show "Glee," who happens to have autism. Before they boarded the bus, the 65 riders gathered at Savers Bank to dance and celebrate with their community.

"Savers Bank sponsored us and have a table with coffee and donuts," said Director of Fundraising Marie Barse. "We are very grateful for them. We have a lot of volunteers here, as well. I wouldn't be able to pull it off without them."

Savers Bank Branch Manager Monique Marinelli spent the hour-long send off passing out coffee and donuts. It's the third year that Savers Bank has helped out the Center of Hope. Said Marinelli: "We want to be

Nichols College bids farewell to the Class of 2015

Brimfield to host town wide tag sale

Neighbors along North Main Street in Brimfield brought out their goods for last year's Town-Wide Tag Sale, a fundraiser for Hitchcock Free Academy.

BRIMFIELD — As the clock strikes 8 a.m. on the morning of May 30, maps for Brimfield's Town-Wide Tag Sale will officially be available for $2 — until 2 p.m. that day, each at Hitchcock Free Academy's parking lot.

One of Brimfield's few truly

Wide Tag Sale is a fundraising event organized by realtors Stephanie Bayliss and Karen Wallace, who started the event in 2011 to benefit Hitchcock Free Academy (HFA), a non-profit community center located in the center of Brimfield.

Last year, 49 homes were town-wide events, the Town- listed on the map, with a number of residents listing again this year because of past years' success. Residents list their homes on the map for $10 each; listing and map proceeds support HFA's mission to provide educational, recreational, and cultural programs for area residents.

There is a variety of advantages for those Brimfield residents who list their tag sale on the Town-Wide map, perhaps the most significant being that all the advertising is done well in advance of the sale.

Lester Dutka has listed his sale on Tower Hill Rd. for the last two years, and said, "The advance advertising is one of the things I like best about participating in the event."

Indeed, plenty of advertising is done for all the sellers online and in print; there is no need for sellers to staple signs to poles and trees throughout the area. Postcards have been mailed to homes and placed in local businesses and notices have gone out to papers; the event is posted online on Hitchcock's website and Facebook page, on local access TV, and on local chambers of commerce: Central Mass Chamber and Quaboag Hills Chamber. The event has its own website as well, www.brimfieldtownwidetagsale.com.

Nancy Giorgio-Kupiek on Dunhamtown Road, who has participated in the sale in previous years, said that what she likes about the sale is that "Our home is very well-hidden, so this gives us the chance to have a tag sale and people can find us!" She said that the last time she had the sale, approximately 50-60 customers came by.

Besides being a great way to clear the house of no-longer needed items, Giorgio-Kupiek said that the Town-Wide Tag Sale "is a great community event; it's lots of fun seeing so many Brimfield neighbors and meeting new people.'

Some neighborhoods, such as the one on Governor Fairbanks road, participate every year, perhaps drawing even more customers since several homes clustered together will have sales.

Governor Fairbanks Rd. resident Bobbi Palmer said, "We all have a blast — it's a great neighborhood event. Now some people know we do the sale together and look for it."

She also said, "We try to be creative; one year the kids made cupcakes and had a lemonade stand. It's just a lot of fun and sometimes we even buy from each other!"

Any Brimfield resident is welcome to list their sale on the map; visit www.hitchcockacademy.org for full details and to download a registration form. Registrations must be received by Friday, May 22 in order to be listed on the map.

Those with questions may call (413) 245-9977 or email sue@hitchcockacademy.org.

Timely tips, just in time for spring

The long-awaited warm weather is finally here and summer is right around the corner! While springtime promises plenty of outdoor fun in the sun it can also bring with it a new season of everyday hassles. From repelling pesky fleas to growing a better garden, the following "timely tips" are geared toward making life's little challenges a little easier!

Make Fleas Flee: It's flea season and here are some home remedies:

• Are fleas bugging your dog? Field and Stream magazine touts Avon Skin So Soft as a great flea and bug repellent for dogs. The magazine recommends mixing: Five parts water to one part Skin So Soft. As a bonus, brushing the mixture into the pet's fur makes its coat gleam.

• Here's an easy way to turn any inexpensive shampoo into a highly productive flea bath for your dog. Add a few drops of natural eucalyptus oil (food grade, not craft oil) to regular shampoo, lather up the dog and rinse away fleas!

Note: Never use essential oils on cats.

• Or, try (original blue) Dawn dishwashing detergent in a tub of water. Lather up the dog or cat well, let sit for five minutes or so and rinse thoroughly. (I tried this and was amazed at all the dead fleas in the sink!). This treatment is for occasional use only as any shampoo can dry your pet's skin.

• Whip up a great, natural flea spray for dogs by mixing equal parts apple cider vinegar and water in a spray bottle. Spritz directly on fur and rub in for maximum benefits.

Gardening season has arrived! Read on for some tips and tricks from green thumb sources:

Want the secret to growing great tomatoes? Blue Ribbon tomato growers reveal planting deep is the golden rule to successful tomato plants! Bury a tomato plant's stem and the stem will sprout new roots that help the plant grow sturdy and tall quickly!

How does your garden grow? With a little help from your garden tools! Keep them clean with a 5-gallon bucket of coarse sand mixed with a quart of clean motor oil in the garage. After using spades and shovels push the metal end in the sand mixture and wipe dry. The sand will knock off the dirt and the oil will prevent rusting!

Do pesky insects invade your garden each year? Here's how to banish bugs the natural way! Aluminum foil "foils" aphids: Use a tin foil mulch around the base of plants. The reflection drives insects away. Deter cabbage worms with a sprinkle of flour, and slay a slug with a dose of table salt.

If visions of planning a lush garden have taken their toll on your trusty old house plants, try this tip: Just stir together one package of granular dry yeast and one quart of warm water. Mix it well and water plants with the elixir monthly to perk up your plants!

Placement is important when growing squash and melons. Because they are pollinated by bees, avoid planting them near other flowering plants, which can compete for bee pollinators.

Plant a chrysanthemum plant in the vegetable garden. Because the flower wilts before other plants when water is needed, it'll act as a red flag to tell you to irrigate. Cucumber and squash plants can also act as indicators because they are the first to droop during a dry spell.

Going on vacation? Keep houseplants watered for up to a month by watering well placing pot and all in a clear plastic bag. Tie it top and bottom and place in northern light. When you're back, untie the top and let the plant adjust to room air for a day or two before removing the plastic completely.

Here are some more seasonal tips:

Firing up the grill for a sizzling steak? New York Times 'Minimalist' and cookbook author Mark Bittman claims the five best steaks for grilling are: rib eye, skirt, sirloin, t-bone and flank steaks, one inch thick. His secret? Dry the steaks with paper towels then grill them without turning for three minutes

Want to serve up the "catch of the day?" Here's a tip to serve up perfect fish every time: Store fresh fish in the refrigerator between self-sealing plastic bags filled with ice cubes. This will keep it from getting soggy and ensure a fabulous fish feast. And if you need to remove fish odors from a pan, just rinse the pan with vinegar while it is still hot.

Sleeping under the stars this season? To keep warm, make sure your sleeping bag fits properly. Too big and you'll lose heat, too small and insulation compresses, compromising the warmth factor. And before turning in, indulge! A high calorie treat like hot cocoa will give your body fuel to burn and keep you warm through the night.

OSV partners with Harrington, YMCA for health fair

STURBRIDGE — What did people in the 1830's know about promoting health and wellness, and can we learn anything from them today?

The answer is a resounding "Yes!" says Dr. Jack Richman, a retired professor of optometry, who notes, "Countless numbers of today's medicines had their origins in the herbaceous plants, tree bark and roots that were used in the 1700's and 1800's."

Dr. Richman is a volunteer re-enactor at Old Sturbridge Village who portrays Dr. Amos Evans, a Navy surgeon who served on the U.S.S. Constitution in the War of 1812.

"Patients still look to their doctors," Dr. Richman explains, "to 'cure-all' and 'prevent-all' in their quest for optimal health. The lessons learned about medical treatment from long-ago continue to educate physicians today." Visitors to the Pound of Cure Health and Wellness Fair at Old Sturbridge Village on May 30-31 will have many opportunities to assess their own physical health, and take steps to improve it. During the two-day event, Harrington HealthCare will offer blood pressure screenings and body composition analysis with weight loss and nutrition advice, as well as hands-only CPR training and Heimlich maneuver instruction. Visitors are also invited to take part in activities offered by the Tri-Community YMCA including Yoga demonstrations, fitness testing, a Born to Move! program for children, and Silver Sneakers and Zumba instruction for seniors.

Children will especially enjoy a Teddy Bear Clinic, where their stuffed companions will receive a check-up and "repair" if necessary, which is a great way to introduce young people to medical personnel and help them to feel comfortable when dealing with illness.

"Harrington HeathCare System and its medical staff are very pleased to support Old Sturbridge Village in its community directed event Pound of Cure," said Arthur Russo, MD, Vice President of Medical Affairs & Chief Medical Officer at Harrington Hospital, "which focuses on the health and wellness of our communities. We strongly endorse every effort to bring health and wellness programs to the communities that our two institutions serve." Costumed historians in the Village will portray a 19th-century doctor, dentist, midwife and phrenologist. The practice of phrenology, a pseudo-science that modern medicine has long since discredited, was very popular in the 1830s, and presumed a connection between the morphology of one's cranium and their emotional and physical well-being, with a map of the head that designated certain areas that supposedly related to different personality traits or mental abilities. In the Village households, interpreters will prepare poultices and other home remedies prescribed for different illnesses, many of which early settlers learned from Native Americans, and still have a use today.

The Sturbridge Fire Department's ambulance and crew will demonstrate modern equipment used in the fastpaced and exciting world of emergency medicine, while UMass Healthcare's LifeFlight helicopter will base its operations from Old Sturbridge Village throughout the weekend.

Worcester State University will also the signs and symptoms of cancer within the 15-to-40 year old age group.

Despite our efforts to extend life, death remains inevitable. So on Sunday, May 31, the Village will re-enact an authentic 19th-century style funeral, complete with mourners, a funeral procession, a funeral meal, tombstone cutting and burial.

The Museum's own Old Sturbridge Inn and Reeder Family Lodges, located adjacent to the Village entrance, offer special lodging packages for the weekend. Travelers can choose from two lodging options: the warm and elegant ambience of the 10-room Oliver Wight House, built on this original site in 1789 and listed on the National Register of Historic Places; or the comfort and convenience of 29 modern lodging units, each with a private entrance and curbside parking. Packages include one night lodging, two-day admission to the Village and craft vouchers for the museum's Hands-On Craft Center. To reserve, call 508-347-5056 or visit www. osv.org/inn. For times and details of all activities during "Pound of Cure," May 30-31, call 800-733-1830 or visit www.osv.org.

'Distractology 101' coming to Sturbridge

STURBRIDGE — McGrath Insurance Group Inc. is proud to bring the state-of-theart Distractology 101 tour to Sturbridge during the week of May 18-22.

Distractology 101 is an interactive program developed by the Arbella Insurance Foundation to teach new drivers the dangers of distracted driving. The campaign features a 36-foot-long, neon-yellow mobile classroom outfitted with high-tech driving simulators designed to give new drivers the chance to experience the perils of distracted driving, including texting while driving.

According to a 2014 report from the Centers for Disease Control, an estimated nine people die and 1,060 are hurt each day as a result of distracted driving. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) reports that 71 percent of teens and young adults say they have composed and sent text messages while driving, and 78 percent of teens and young adults say they have read a text while driving. Sending or receiving a text message takes a driver's eyes off the road for an average of 4.6 seconds—the equivalent of driving the length of an entire football field at 55 mph, blind. According to the Governors Highway Safety Association, teens represented the largest proportion of drivers who were distracted at the time of a fatal crash and 57 percent of those killed were the teen drivers themselves.

"Despite increased awareness of the dangers of distracted driving, the epidemic shows few signs of slowing down," said John Donohue, chairman, president and CEO of the Arbella Insurance Group, and chairman and president of the Arbella Insurance Foundation. "We remain dedicated, for a fifth year, to our mission of educating young drivers on the perils of distracted driving. Distractology is a highly effective tool because it gives drivers a very clear picture of the consequences of a distracted driving crash scenario."

To date, nearly 10,000 new drivers, meaning those that have been licensed less than three years or have a learner's permit, have completed the Distractology 101 training. After taking our course, students were 22 percent less likely to check their phone while driving and 38 percent less comfortable with the idea of multi-tasking behind the wheel.

"Since 2010, Distractology 101 has played a vital role in educating our communities' young drivers on the dangers of distracted driving," said Richard McGrath, president and CEO of McGrath Insurance Group. "Though laws are now in place against distracted driving, education is the real key to making sure drivers make smart decisions behind the wheel. We at McGrath Insurance are proud to host the Distractology tour for our teens in Sturbridge."

"The Sturbridge Police Department decided to participate in the Distractology 101 because distracted driving is very dangerous, and tragically teenagers behind the wheel distracted are most at risk of being in a fatal or serious injury crash," said Lt. Earl Dessert. "The Sturbridge Police Department hopes that by hosting the Distractology 101 it will educate our young drivers and open their eyes to how quickly a crash can occur when they are distracted while driving." The Distractology driving simulator, based on Arbellafunded research conducted with the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, will travel to various communities in Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island during the 2014-2015 school year, offering 45 minutes of simulated distracted driving to each participant.

During the driving simulator training — Distractology 101: A Crash Course on Distracted Driving - teens and other new drivers face a number of scenarios based on real-world examples, educating participants on how to anticipate hidden hazards, react to the road and avoid accidents. Participants also complete the online portion of the curriculum at www.DistractU.com and make a safe-driving pledge in order to complete the training.

To sign up for the free Distractology 101 training, contact the Sturbridge Police Department at 508-347-2525, ext. 318.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR Tryba: 'We must never forget'

To the Editor:

Memorial Day is the day Americans set aside to honor those brave men and women who met tragic ends during times of war. We must use this day to honor their sacrifices, to pray for their families and to bow our heads in recognition of their service. We must never forget.

You have seen their faces, heard their names, and maybe even heard their voices — those who gave the ultimate sacrifice during all wars. This Memorial Day, American Legion Auxiliary Unit Champeau-Vilandre 109 members would like to invite Sturbridge residents to join us in remembrance of our nation's fallen heroes.

The American Legion Auxiliary (ALA) is the world's largest women's patriotic service organization, with nearly 800,000 members and 9,000 units in communities across the nation. The American Legion Auxiliary serves nearly 1 million veterans every year. Right here in Sturbridge, we continue to help mitigate the challenges our veterans face and deliver upon our mission by organizing multiple events throughout the year to support veterans and their families in civilian life.

I invite you to pause today to remember those who have fought for our freedoms.

American Legion Auxiliary members have dedicated themselves for nearly a century to meeting the needs of our nation's veterans, military and their families both here and abroad. They volunteer millions of hours yearly, with a value of nearly $2 billion. As part of the world's largest women's patriotic service organization, Auxiliary volunteers across the country also step up to honor veterans and military through annual scholarships and with ALA Girls State programs, teaching high school juniors to be leaders grounded in patriotism and Americanism.

To learn more about the Auxiliary's mission or to volunteer, donate or join, visit www.ALAforVeterans.org.

From childcare costs to college savings

If you're a working par-FINANCIAL ent, you know firsthand about the difficulties of finding quality, affordable care for your children. But eventually, your kids head off to school, and those childcare bills go away, or at least diminish greatly. When that happens, you could start putting away money for another one of your children's milestones — college.

Just how expensive is childcare? Costs vary greatly among the 50 states, but the national average for a 4-year-old at a child care center is approximately $7,880 per year, according to Child Care Aware of America, a child care resource and referral agency sponsored by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. What could you do with this money once your child enters kindergarten?

Of course, not all schools provide allday kindergarten, so you still may have some child care costs. For the purposes of illustration, let's presume you can finally say "goodbye" to childcare costs when your child is in first grade, and let's also assume your child is attending a public school. If you invested that $7,880 every year for 12 years, until your child reaches 18, you could accumulate more than $150,000 in a tax-advantaged college savings account, such as a 529 plan — assuming the money was placed in a hypothetical investment that earned 7 percent per year (keep in mind, though, that the word "hypothetical" means exactly that, because whenever you put money in any variable investment, there are no guarantees).

Actually, earnings in a 529 plan accumulate and are distributed tax free, provided they are used for qualified higher education expenses (529 plan distributions not used for qualified expenses may be subject to federal and state

Armed with degree а in Communications (which many believed I would never use) and a minor in English, I stepped off the ECSU campus with a 3.5 GPA, a rookie making his first foray into a world of professional uncertainty.

It was a risk, that's for sure. I entered college in the fall of 2001 with aspirations of becoming an elementary school teacher, and the first year was spent working toward that goal. The communications field — classes in media, TV, radio and the like — were just too tempting to me. Couple with that a few harsh realizations that steered me away from teaching and there I was, diverted onto a new path, and I honestly haven't looked back since.

The story of how I came to be where I am now is really a tale of good timing. After graduating in May 2005, I found myself looking for options, but my search was broad. With vague training in a variety of fields, I wasn't really sure which route to take in the communications field, which consists of so many Luckily, I had part-time work as a stagehand that summer, setting up and taking down stages for acts at Mohegan Sun, the XL Center and other venues in the Hartford area, so that kept me busy part-time as I looked for a full-time solution.

It was about four months later — a couple days after what would be my last gig working the stage for Green Day at the XL Center — that I opened up a brand new newspaper that had come to my parents' house called The Woodstock Villager. It was different. It was extremely local. I had heard that a company called Stonebridge Press was starting up a group of newspapers in northeast Connecticut, and I liked what I saw. Just out of curiosity, I pored over the paper. I had thought about venturing into the world of print journalism, but never really took the leap. I knew I was a creative writer — or at least I thought I was. And I knew that given a real opportunity, I could contribute.

Sure enough, near the back of the paper, I saw it — a help wanted ad. It was for a freelancing opportunity, about four stories a week. There it was. That was my in.

The only problem? I had never written for my high school or college newspapers, so I was immediately at a disadvantage. I had no portfolio to speak of. I only had clippings of church flyers that I had designed. If I was going to get this job, I was going to have to do it without any proof I could actually do it.

I sent an e-mail to the editor at the time, Walter Bird Jr., who almost immediately returned my inquiry and invited me in for an interview the next day. I was shocked it had taken so short a time to set it up, but I was excited, nervous and terrified all at the same time.

Only a few days after my 21st birthday, I found myself sitting in Walter's office. I don't remember much about the interview, I was so nervous. I was honest about my lack of experience, though — and he assured me with a line I still remember to this day. This job is a great one for on-the-job training. If I was going to learn, this was the job for me. It was a start, and I was sold. I wanted it. The next day, he was on board too, because he took a chance on me and hired me. I'll always appreciate him for taking the chance on me.

My first story was on the 75th anniversary of Bowen's Garage in Eastford, of the entire Morgan dollar series. Approximately 1.2 million were originally minted. And, while that is not the lowest mintage of the series (it's actually the 14th lowest mintage), the surviving number in mid-to-high grades is rare. The coin was issued during an "up time" in American commerce and it was heavily circulated in everyday transactions. As a result there are relatively few in AU (almost uncirculated) and BU (brilliant uncirculated) condition.

Of the two coins received, one was in VG 8 condition and the other was BU (possibly BU 60 or 62). The first coin had seen much use. While still an original (not cleaned) coin, it was a dull grey, with numerous handling dings. The second coin was a beautiful bright white original coin. It had a great deal of "cartwheel" luster. The cartwheel effect can only be found on an uncleaned coin. What is the cartwheel effect? When the coin is struck at the mint, the enormous pressure of the dies coming together forces the metal outward toward the rim of the coin. The metal flows evenly, in 360 degrees until it hits the metal collar. This flow creates "flow lines" which consists of ridges and intervening valleys. The cartwheel effect is the reflection of a light source hitting one side of the ridge. The result is a glimmering brightness that "moves" around the surface of the coin like the spokes of a bicycle wheel as the coin is slightly tilted back and forth in one's hand.

The reason why this effect cannot occur on a cleaned coin is due to the movement of metal, or the filling in of the valleys during cleaning. When the surface of a coin is rubbed with a cloth, no matter how soft the cloth is, minute particles of metal are rubbed off of the top of the ridge and forced down into the abutting valley. This metal destroys the smooth surface of the sides of the valley, thus disrupting the ability of the sides of the valley to reflect light cleanly.

simply handled by a bare hand, without a glove, the oil in our skin, which keeps our skin supple, attaches to the metal surface of the coin. This especially occurs in the lower areas of the surface (the valleys). Over time the oil attracts contaminants in the air. This results in a darkening of the area where the oil is. The darkened areas then do reflect light, but rather absorb the light.

The lesson to be learned is twofold first, never handle a coin's flat surfaces with a bare hand. If you must handle a coin do so carefully. Only handle a coin by the edge. I have seen many coins that exhibit a darkened fingerprint that may have been inadvertently placed there decades earlier. The second lesson is to never clean a coin to make it "look pretty.

I estimated that the two 1892 S Morgans I examined in Buffalo were valued as follows: the VG 8 coin would be worth about $120 (retail), while the MS 60-62 coin was worth approximately $35,000-$37,000 (retail). Had the second coin been lightly cleaned its value would have dropped to about $1,650. Condition...condition... condition.

income tax and a 10 percent IRS penalty on the earnings). Also, your 529 plan contributions may be deductible from vour state taxes. However, 529 plans vary, so be sure to check with your tax advisor regarding deductibility.

A 529 plan offers other benefits, too. For one thing, the lifetime contribution limits are generous; while these limits vary by state, some plans allow contributions well in excess of $200,000. And a 529 plan is flexible: If your child decides against college or vocational school, you can transfer the unused funds to another family member, tax and penalty free.

A 529 plan is a widely used choice for college savings, but it is not your only option. You could also consider a Coverdell Education Savings Account, which, like a 529 plan, can generate tax-free earnings if the money is used for higher education expenses. You can typically only put in a maximum of $2,000 per year to a Coverdell account, but it lets you use the funds on K-12 and college expenses.

Whichever college-savings vehicle you choose, it will take discipline on your part to continue investing in it, year after year. And after freeing yourself from those childcare bills, you can certainly think of other ways to use this "found" money. That's why you might want to automatically move money from your checking or savings account to your 529 plan, Coverdell account or other investment earmarked for college. As your income rises over the years, vou can increase the amount of these automatic transfers.

In any case, once those childcare bills stop, you can put that money to work on your children's behalf. Make the most of this opportunity.

SOUTHBRIDGE — With the Relay for Life of the Greater Southbridge Area coming to town in June, many local teams want to find ways to raise more money for the American Cancer Society. One of those ways is Relay Fun Day, which took place on the Town Common on Saturday, May 16.

"Each team wants to raise as much as they can," said Fun Day Co-Chairman Kimberly Desy from inside a food truck. "This is where Relay teams can sell various items to raise money for their teams. The whole point is to stop cancer and find cures."

Relay for Life teams sold jewelry, hand-made items and provided face painting. Local vendors also donated to the Relay For Life to set up shop at the

"I like how Southbridge always finds a way to come together for a good cause," said Co-Chairman Shaun Moriarty. "Any time we can raise awareness and funds for the fight against cancer is a success."

The crowd wasn't as big as Desy had hoped for. Despite nice weather there had been threats of rain, which she believed may have kept people inside. Said Desy: "Events like these get the teams out and talking. It also normally gets the public out to raise awareness. I would definitely like to thank everyone who took the time and effort to come out on this overcast day to support a truly worthy cause."

also make an appearance. There will also be a motorcycle run that starts at the Elk's Club. The committee is still looking for more raffle items.

"Aislen had a tumor when she was young. It was in her abdomen," said Fundraising Committee Organizer Pat McHugh. She works with Dawn and has been helping to raise money for years. "It was cancerous. She got treatment right after her 5th birthday. Unfortunately, the treatment they had to give her to survive ruined her lungs. That was one of the side affects. She was supposed to get a double lung transplant in January. But they found out she wasn't a candidate."

The diagnosis at 5 years old was neuroelastoma. The aggressive treatments led the family down a very difficult road. Right now they are dealing with Aislen's inability to grow or gain weight and her chronic lung disease. The family was in shock, but Dawn said Aislen will never give up.

"Anybody who knows her likes her huge personality," continued Dawn. "She's witty. She's funny. She's stubborn. But 90 percent of the time she has a positive outlook. She's not going to give up. Sometimes it can be stressful, but she's not going to just take the diagnosis and say, 'Oh well, that's it.' Everybody absolutely loves her."

Everybody, including Bay Path Regional Vocational Technical High School, where Aislen has been going to school. With the recent discovery that Aislen wasn't a candidate for a lung transplant, the New Year started out rocky, getting to the point where she wasn't able to make it at all.

"They were absolutely wonderful," Dawn recalls. "Even though she can't always be there, they make sure she's receiving instructions and they put together packets for her. Very, very supportive and caring. The students are great. It's wonderful."

While the fundraiser will help Aislen's family deal with medical bills and take Aislen on a few day trips, Dawn hopes that it will also let people know that there are resources available to them.

"When you're in the midst of something so huge and so all-consuming in your life there are people out there who can help," she said. "There are resources. We are very lucky to live in Massachusetts and have the best hospitals anywhere. You can't get much better."

Staff writer Olivia Richman spoke with Aislen to learn more about the teenager behind the fundraiser. Just like her mother said, she was a positive, talkative girl with a big personality.

How do you feel that there are people in this community who support you?

"Whoever is doing it, I'm very thankful. It does feel great that people care. It feels nice that people will do that kind of thing for others."

What are your hobbies?

"I'm not super mobile. Most of the time I'm sitting at home with the animals. I just got two kittens. I have always wanted cats."

What do you do at home?

"I play video games a lot. I like to play two-player games. I don't like to play alone. I like to play Playstation. Right now I've been playing a lot of Borderlands."

Great game! I heard that you recently visited Washington, D.C., thanks to efforts by the Fundraising Committee.

"Washington was amazing. I've always heard about the Smithsonian. My parents went. I was finally I was able to go. It was super neat."

I was told you were a history buff.

"My parents got me interested in history. Growing up, we'd always watch a lot of documentaries. I grew up around it. I love learning about natural history. It's amazing how things that are so old are discovered. History is never forgotten."

What do you study at Bay Path?

"I was in Machine Shop at Bay Path."

Really? Interesting. What made you get into that?

"At first I was set on Health

Aislen and her best friend Emily Rose on their way to the Dr. Who 50th Anniversary Movie. According to her mother, Aislen is a huge fan of the series, particularly the tenth doctor, which is who she is dressed as.

Technology. I wanted to be a doctor. Then I tried Machine Shop. Something clicked. It was super fun. It's very interesting because with that there are so many job opportunities. You can machine anything. If you look around the room, everything around the room has a part that was machined."

Your mother said you are planning day trips, including one to Boston. What are some of the trips you want to take?

"I don't normally think too far ahead. Nobody knows how long ... I'm just going to keep it short and simple."

A decade in the 'real world'

my hometown. I was green as grass, and the story showed it, but it was mine. Seeing my name on the byline and my pictures in print was a thrill that hasn't faded to this day, even 10 years, and several hundred editions and thousands of pictures later.

It was only about six weeks later that I was promoted to a full-time staff writer. I remember the day I came in to the office for the first time as an employee — Nov. 28, 2005. I was so nervous, and my head was spinning so fast with everything I needed to learn, that I locked myself outside of my car three times in two days. AAA loved me that week.

Within my first two weeks on the job, I was covering a murder. Talk about being thrown into the fire. It was so difficult talking to friends, family and neighbors, I nearly quit right then. For those of you who think journalists don't have a soul, think again. It's hard on us, too.

As the weeks went on, and turned into years, I picked up a lot of lessons along the way — too many to fit into this week's column (perhaps another time). My writing improved, and I worked up the ladder, taking on each challenge as it was presented to me. Opportunities started to come my way. In June 2007, I transitioned into becoming an editor. Suddenly, less than two years after starting myself, I had writers to train. More papers within the company were added, little by little, to my umbrella, and before I knew it, in 2010 I was the managing editor of our entire Massachusetts and Connecticut division. And now it's 2015 - what a difference 10 years makes!

If you asked me in May 2005, as I sat there in my black cap and gown, if I thought I would be the managing editor of a local newspaper company, I would have had my doubts.

Who knows what the next 10 years will hold out here in the real world...

Poppy Days — May 21, 22 and 23, Sturbridge. For more than 70 years the American Legion Auxiliary has sponsored Poppy Day's to remind America that millions have sacrificed their lives and health to keep our nation strong and free.

The Poppy, which grew wild on the battlefields of Flanders, became, in the minds of the doughboys of World War I, a symbol of the sacrifice they had endured. It had flourished among the shelled buildings and bomb-scarred landscape. It's blood red bloom, so much like the blood that had been shed there, became a sign of hope and renewal for those who lived and walked away. For those who would never leave, those who had sacrificed their lives, it was a perpetual memorial to their bravery. American Veterans brought home that image and planted it with the Auxiliary where it has bloomed every year for the benefit of those who served America. The Memorial Poppy contributions are devoted entirely to rehabilitation and assistance for Veterans and their families.

YMCA swim programs offer mix of fun, physical activity, safety

SOUTHBRIDGE — As swim season approaches, the Tri-Community YMCA encourages children and parents in surrounding towns to explore the many benefits of swimming, while also keeping safety top of mind. In the Y's swim programs, participants can enjoy water sports, enhance or learn new techniques, meet new friends and develop confidence, while also learning safety skills that can save lives.

"Swimming is a fun and enjoyable activity for children and adults alike, and it's an easy way to stay physically active and improve strength, flexibility and stamina," said Barbara Suprenant, Aquatics Director for the YMCA. "The Tri-Community YMCA is committed to providing as many opportunities as possible for everyone to swim and learn water safety practices."

As part of National Water Safety Month in May, the Tri-Community YMCA encourages parents to take an active role in their child's safety. Following are safety tips to practice when in and around the water: • Only swim when and where there is a lifeguard on duty; never swim alone.

• Adults should constantly and actively watch their children.

• Inexperienced or non-swimmers should wear a Coast Guardapproved life jacket.

• Parents or guardians of young children should be within an arm's reach.

• Children and adults should not engage in breath holding activities.

In addition to learning lifesaving water safety skills, children can increase their physical activity by swimming. Swimming also motivates children to strive for self-improvement, teaches goal orientation, and cultivates a positive mental attitude and high self-esteem. It also teaches life lessons of sport and sportsmanship, so that children can learn how to work well with teammates and coaches and how to deal with winning and losing.

To learn more about The Tri-Community YMCA swim programs - from introductory swimming classes, family swim, water exercise classes and series competitive swimming, please contact the Y at 508-765-5466, bsuprenant@tricommunityymca.org or visit tricommunityymca.org.

various educational projects. A project must be innovative, be consistent with school or district goals, and encourage leadership and creativity. It must also promote collaboration between educational professionals, teachers, parents and community groups. Ultimately, projects should also allow for successful replication or expansion in other classrooms or schools.

Tickets to the event are available on-line at www.tedfound.org/events or by contacting Laurie Placella, Ted. President at placellal@tantasqua.org.

Ted. is a community-sponsored, independent, nonprofit organization dedicated to providing financial resources to support projects and programs that encourage students to develop their talents, become lifelong learners, and pursue excellence. Rider Tavern bosts second Civil War Ballroom event

public a view of what might have gone on in this building nearly 200 years ago," said Historical Society President Frank Morrill. "I think the most important part of this event is community letting people come into the building and see what it would have been used for in its prime. It lets people have a fun night of education and learn about the beginnings of dance.'

Rider Tavern, owned by the Charlton Historical Society, was recently redone. It was built in the year 1799, the year George Washington died. General Marquis de Lafayette had lunch in the Tavern, reviewing his troops across the street.

"It's beautiful," said Morrill. "It's very, very unusual to have a building of this magnitude for people in the town and they don't know what it is. It's a very, very busy road. I've had people say to me, 'What is that big yellow building?' It's a significant structure. It's important to preserve it for history.

Rider Tavern was a place for people to rest their horses. It was an inn and a bar. Lining the walls are authentic posters from the early 1800's advertising meetings in town and even ballroom events upstairs, right where the Small Planet Dancers did their Victorian dances earlier this month.

Small Planet Dancers Artistic Director Josephine Sarnelli said the Rider Tavern was the right setting to perform in.

Said Sarnelli: "That ballroom upstairs would have had quadrilles performed in it. They would have had social dances up here. There's something about coming back here and doing the dances that is just perfect. They were doing these exact dances in the same building.'

Small Planet Dancers aimed to bring the past back to life, one twirl and bow at a time.

"I enjoy music and history," said Morrill. "To be able to look back 150 years or more is quite unique. You get to see how people dressed and danced. They make it look easy, but there are so many complicated steps. It's an enjoyable thing to see."

Sarnelli started the dance troupe back in 1986 with the hope of educating as well as just providing entertainment. They are untrained dancers who perform popular dances from World War II, the Middle East and World War I. They have been doing the Civil War Ballroom for the past five years.

"Our costumes are authentic." said Sarnelli. "We use cheap fabrics that would have been available during the period. Most of us hand-made them. The costumes have six yards of fabric in the skirt alone. It's a bit of a challenge, with the boning and stabilizers. They were constructed with a lot of detail."

To put together a Civil War Ballroom, Sarnelli learned a lot about history during the time period. She found that most of the dances were originally military formations done on horseback. It was considered patriotic. In Europe the horses were eventually eliminated and replaced by four couples. She described the dancing as elegant and civilized.

"Look at the dynamic change that has taken place today," said Morrill. "When the waltz first began in America it was banned in many places by the Puritans because the people were holding hands and touching. It was considered very risqué. That has changed just a bit. I'll leave it at that!"

Learn more about Small Planet Dancers at www.smallplanetdancers. com and more about Charlton Historical Society at www.charltonhistoricalsociety.org.

Olivia Richman can be reached at 508-909-4132 or by e-mail at olivia@stonebridgepress.com.

When the waltz came to America it was banned by Puritans because the dancers held hands, considered scandalous back then.

The Victorian Quadrille Orchestra was invited back by the Historical Society as well.

reach them better and they're more receptive to learning. The students will be overall more responsive to education. We don't want kids to get bored. We think they should have things to do. They should have the opportunity to do more things outside of the regular school curriculum.'

The projects all vary. One grant covered a summer camp program for students that uses animals in lessons to teach "integrity, honesty, loyalty, compassion, kindness, confidence and respect." Another will bring 100 paperbacks to a 9th grade literature class that feature female and minority protagonists. There were grants for Kindles, Chromebooks and iPad Minis. One teacher requested a grant for an African Arts in program, Education where the band Crocodile

Music spends a week interactive, teaching students about drumming and dancing.

"One of the things I am most proud of in our district is our strong commitment to the arts,' said Desto. "Our visual and performing arts programs are as good as you will find anywhere. These types of opportunities are beneficial to kids in more ways than you can name, but among them are expanded creative thinking and the chance for non-traditional learners to connect to something at school. I believe that arts education actually strengthens students' abilities in traditional subjects as well because it just requires kids to be able to think in different ways that ultimately benefit them across the board."

Evans agreed. He looked back on summer programs that were funded in the past that got children out of the classroom and into a more creative atmosphere.

In more recent years, Evans noticed that a lot of summer programs and interactive experiences have disappeared from the applications. Many teachers and teams now ask for Chrome Books, iPads and other tablets for the classroom. He estimates that around 80 percent of grants were technological related.

"It's not that we don't find the importance of Chrome Books. That's the direction education is going in right now," said Evans. "However, it would be nice to see more people apply for summer camp projects and afterschool projects. It adds variety. But we want to give people what they need."

Olivia Richman can be reached at 508-909-4132 or by email at olivia@stonebridgepress.com.

"Very often in negotiations and other consideration it is casy to forget that the schools don't exist for the benefit of adults. They exist for the benefit of the students."

Lorinda Allen received $5,000 towards a seminar for all staff members called "Day of Professional Development" with Dr. Todd Whitaker.

Joe Rogalski and Gretchen Tucker will be using their $5,000 grant towards 16 Chromebooks and 12 Google management console licenses to be used for History and English classes.

Jamie Congdon received $3,498.56 towards her goal of building e-readers into each 9th and 10th grade English inclusion classroom. The grant purchased 88 Kindles.

Amy Marshall was awarded a $5,000 grant towards 20 iPad Minis.

erary project. The money will be used to purchase 100 paperback books for 9th grade literature classes.

A $5,000 grant went to Wendy Kalwarcczyk and Erin Anderson towards their STEM Learning Lab program.

The Grade 5 Team received $650 towards the Dudley Middle School Jump Start Program.

Recipe: Sautéed Rice and Spring Vegetables

Ingredients:

- 1 inch fresh Ginger Root Chopped (this can be eliminated, but substitute chopped garlic)
- 2 tsp. Soy Sauce (more if you'd prefer)
- 34 Cup Feta Cheese cubed
- 1 1/2 Tablespoons Olive Oil
- 1 Cup Long Grain Rice
- 2 Cups Chicken or Vegetable Stock
- 1 Bunch Sliced Spring Onions
- 2 Cups Fresh Mushrooms

- 2 Cups leftover cooked chicken, beef or
- cooked seafood (optional)
- 2 T. Chopped Fresh Coriander Chopped Fresh Parsley 1 T
- Salt and Pepper to taste
 - Fresh Parsley to sprinkle over the top when servina

• Put the ginger in a garlic press and squeeze out the ginger juice into a small bowl. Mix in the soy sauce.

• Add the cubes of feta and gently toss to coat. Set aside for flavor to come together.

• Heat ½ T. of the oil in a large saucepan, add the rice and toss gently for 2–3 minutes, stirring, until translucent. Slowly pour in the stock. Stir constantly until mixed well. Cover the pan with a tight-fitting lid. Leave to cook over a low heat for 12–15 minutes or until the stock has been absorbed and the rice is tender.

• Meanwhile, heat the remaining 1 T. oil in a sauté pan or large non-stick frying pan. Add the onions and mushrooms, and sauté for 1 minute, stirring. Add the peas and asparagus and sauté for a further 2–3 minutes, stirring frequently the vegetables are tender but still crisp.

• Stir in the feta cheese with its marinade and cook gently for about 30 seconds, just to heat through, turning the cheese carefully to prevent it from breaking up too much. Add meat item.

- Fluff up the rice with a fork, put on platter.
- Spoon veggie mixture (and meat) over rice.

FOOD

The Sweetest Apple On Earth

Want a sweet treat? There's an apple for that named KIKU and it's delicious in a grilled cheese sandwich.

(NAPS)

A Kiku apple a day can make a terrific snack: A medium-size one has about 100 calories and is a good source of fiber and vitamin C. What's more, you and your family will likely love its supersweet taste.

Ranking Sweetness Apples are ranked on a sweetness scale according to brix (the sugar percentage naturally found in the apples). Most apples have a brix of 12 to 14 percent. Apples that are sweeter (such as Gala) are at the high end of that range while traditional apples including Honeycrisp and Red Delicious are in the middle to lower end. Brix levels in Kiku apples, which are said to be quite possibly the sweetest apples you'll ever taste, typically range from 16 to 17 percent, often even higher.

Kiku apples are also known for their extreme crunch, juiciness, attractively striped, rubyred color and intriguing origin. The KIKU Story

It all started back in 1990, when an Italian apple expert by the name of Luis Braun was traveling through Japan. He discovered an apple that was dramatically different from all the other apples in its orchard. He was so mesmerized by its supersweet, full-flavored taste that he took a branch from the tree back with him to Italy. Once home, he painstakingly set out to grow as many trees as he could, making it his mission to share this new flavor with the world.

Within the U.S., KIKU apples are grown in Washington state, Michigan and Pennsylvaniawith more trees being planted across expanded acres in those states to ensure that strong demand for KIKU apples is met.

"Kiku is very quickly joining the ranks of premium apples that savvy consumers are increasingly seeking," said Steve Lutz, Vice President of Marketing for apple grower Columbia Marketing International, Inc. and former CEO for the Washington Apple Commission. "Cultivating new apple trees is a labor of love," he added. "It can take three to five years to nurture new apple trees. Our growers have been working overtime to bring Kiku to market."

Smart Snacking

The extreme sweetness of Kiku apples lends appeal to it being a healthy snack option. "It's a great option to help beat the mid-afternoon slump," said registered dietitian and food blogger Laura Chalela Hoover, who recommends eating the apple in place of nutrient-void sweets, which often contain processed sugars and additives. "Naturally sweet foods like Kiku can stop sugar cravings and help you break an unhealthy sugar addiction.³

Enjoy An Apple Sandwich

Delicious fresh, these apples also make a wonderful addition to classic dishes, including the grilled cheese sandwich. Simply layer apple slices and your favorite cheese between two slices of bread and grill at a low temperature. The sweet juiciness of the apples melds beautifully with melted cheese, making a warm, tasty treat relished by kids and adults alike.

Kiku apples also make an excellent addition to salads or smothered with peanut butter. Learn More vidual, single-serving packets that are easy to pop into backpacks, briefcases, travel bags, overnight totes and purses-they're even TSA friendly for the airport.

The treat, called Crispy Fruit, is non-GMO Project Verified and available in a convenient "Grab & Go" 6-pack as well as individual, single-serving bags. Fuel Your Day With Fresh Pear Smoothies

By pairing pears with other whole-food ingredients, you can fuel your day with fiber and protein.

(NAPS)

Shake up your smoothie routine and add fresh pears to the blender to boost your breakfast or snack. Pears are packed with fiber, making them a sweet and satisfying smoothie ingredient. By pairing pears with other whole-food ingredients, you can fuel your day with fiber and protein. Pears blend well with a variety of smoothie staples, such as bright berries, vibrant greens, Greek yogurt, nuts and seeds.

Keep the skin on your pears for optimum fiber content. Whether ripe and juicy or still slightly firm, pears add great texture and flavor to smoothies.

Experiment with nutty textures and flavors to complement pears' natural sweetness. Hazelnuts, chia seeds, shredded coconut, and oats all add nutrients for easier meals on the go. Rather than adding ice for texture, go with frozen berries for a smooth, creamy drink.

In this recipe, pears, blueberries and oats combine for a hearty breakfast drink. Think of it as a bowl of oatmeal to go!

Your cover letter and resume will get you in the door, but it's the interview that will make or break you. During these times of high unemployment when so many applicants are vying for the same position, an employer may want to see you two or three times before making a final decision. You need to separate yourself from the rest of the pack during this interview process in order to get noticed and be hired. Follow these tips to increase your chances of getting the job.

1. Make an entrance. Arrive on time and dressed appropriately for the position. From the moment you walk through the door, everyone from the receptionist to potential fellow employees will size you up as you wait nervously for the interview to begin. Be on your toes every moment during this downtime. You never know who your future boss may be and if they are watching.

2. Know the name of the interviewer and pronounce it correctly. Nothing can kill an interview faster than mispronouncing the name of the person who may hire you. If need be, call in advance and ask for the correct spelling and pronunciation of the interviewer. When introduced, repeat their name. Don't offer to shake hands unless the interviewer initiates the handshake. Then shake with a firm grip. A limp handshake is a big turn-off.

3. Know what the company produces or what services they offer. Doing research on the company you are interviewing with is crucial to having a good interview. Employers are going to ask why you want to work for them—you'd better have a good answer. Your knowledge that they are the number one seller of kettledrums in the state or that they have won the service award for the past eight years in a row will go a long way toward impressing the interviewer. However, you should not flaunt your knowledge at the interview. Reciting statistics to the interviewer to impress them with your knowledge can backfire. It only tells them that you studied up to get the job, nothing more. If you are knowledgeable about the company, it will come through during the conversation.

4. Get the interviewer interested in you. This is your chance to sell your personality to the interviewer. They already know from your resume what skills you have. What they want to find out in an interview is what kind of personality you have and whether or not you will fit into their company. Enthusiasm is the key no matter what the topic is. If you display sincere enthusiasm, the interviewer can't help but be interested in you. Imagine being the interviewer, asking the same questions to 10 different people and hearing 10 similar responses. How boring. Remember, you need to separate yourself from the rest of the pack. But, be genuine in your enthusiasm. Interviewers can read insincerity instantly and you'll lose all credibility.

5. Answer each question thoughtfully. Every question you are asked was asked for a purpose. Don't assume you're having a casual conversation and let you're naving u remark you make can be meaningful. Remember, the interview started the moment you walked in the door.

6. Know when to stop talking. When answering a question, do so concisely but fully, then stop talking. When the interviewer says nothing, many interviewees make the mistake of assuming the interviewer wasn't satisfied with the answer, so they ramble on, trying to fill the void. What is said during this time period can often play against you. Silence is a ploy used by many interviewers to see how you handle stress. If put in this situation, just sit quietly. Don't fidget and don't look around the room; look directly at the interviewer and wait. The silence won't last long because the interviewer has a time limit and a lot of information to still get through. If you're prepared for the silence, it will pass quickly. Be patient and a warm satisfaction will fill you as you realize you passed the test

7. Have intelligent questions prepared. Sometime near the end of the interview, you will most likely be asked if you have any questions. Don't say no, even if the interviewer thoroughly went over the position and answered many of the questions you had before arriving. Show interest in the interviewer by asking them how they like working for the company and what they don't like about it. Getting the interviewer to talk about themselves is a way to get to know their personality, so you can decide whether or not you'd like to work closely with them.

8. Negotiate a salary with care. More people lose the job here than any other place during the interview. Talking money is tricky. If you price yourself too low, they may think you're not as good as you claim to be. If you price yourself too high, you'll come off as being "full of yourself." If the interviewer asks you how much money you want, you know they're at least interested in hiring you. But don't offer a figure unless you first know the salary range they're offering, or you may price yourself out of the job. For example, if you flatly state that you won't take less than $35,000 and they say their top dollar is $28,000, you can't change your mind and say "I'll take it" or you'll appear as a person who doesn't stand by their convictions. Instead of replying to the question, "How much money do you want?" answer with another question, 'How much are you offering?" If what they offer is less than you want but you really want to work there, try to negotiate for a salary review in three months to the pay level you desire. If they're satisfied with your work, they'll give you the raise.

INANAN

Remember, how you perform in the interview will determine if you get the job. Be sincere, enthusiastic and knowledgeable about the position to separate yourself from other potential employees.

Get A Handle On Interview Panels

ent from an interview with one person. The best thing about being interviewed by a panel is that you get it over all at once. You don't have to go through multiple interviews and answer the same questions over and over. When faced with several people, however, you might find the interview daunting. Here are some tips to help you get through it with ease.

Tip #1

Treat the interviewers equally. Although they have come together as a panel to hire the best person for the job, each has their own agenda and questions. Don't favor one over the other. Tip #2 tion and make eye contact with all the members of the panel as you answer the question.

Tip #4

Ask for clarification when needed. If an interviewer asks a question that you do not understand, request that they restate the question or provide further details. Don't hedge in the hopes that the interviewer will move on.

Tip #5 Stay focused. Depending upon the makeup of the panel, you could be faced with one or several different interview styles. Don't get confused and lose sight of the reason you are there-to show how

You've been looking for a new job for some time now, and after sending out several resumes, you've finally got an interview. But it's not with one person-it's with a panel. That's right. Five people from different departments are going to be interviewing you to determine if you're the right candidate for the job. You've never been interviewed by a panel and you're not sure what to expect. Don't worry. It's not that differAddress the questions of the interviewers one at a time. Don't rush and try to answer three questions all at once. You could wind up giving clipped answers, or worse, lose your train of thought and answer nothing.

Tip #3

Speak directly to the panel. Look at the person who is asking you a ques-

The only thing different about a panel interview is the number of people who are interviewing you. Prepare ahead of time as you would for a normal interview. Know what you are going to wear and say, and arrive on time ready to go.

The Ins And Outs Of Hiring

BY TRESA ERICKSON

Hiring an employee is not an easy task, but if your business is growing and you need additional staff, you may have to step up to the challenge. Where do you start? How do you define the position you need to fill? What makes a good employee? These are just some of the many questions you'll have to answer as you look for an employee.

Before you post any openings, you should first determine if the need for a new employee is genuine. Jot down a list of responsibilities that you would like the new employee to fulfill. Study it carefully. Are you certain that there is enough work to hire another person, or could you divide the responsibilities among other employees? Before you answer that question, think about your budget. Do you have the funds necessary to hire another employee? Not only will you have to pay their salary, but you may need to purchase other items, such as office furniture and equipment, to accommodate them.

If it turns out that you do need a new employee, you should clarify the position for which you are hiring. What exactly will the new employee be doing? Refer to the list of responsibilities you compiled earlier. Are you certain that one person can handle all of the tasks? You may discover that what you need is a part-time illustrator and a parttime editor rather than a full-time designer. Once you have a better idea of the type of position you need to fill, you can sketch out the responsibilities in a job description.

As you write up the job description, think about the kind of person you would like to hire. What kind of qualities would the ideal candidate have? List them on paper. Then read through your list and weed out any qualities that are unrealistic and underline those that the candidate must have, such as education, experience and work ethic. As you do this, keep your budget in mind. If you can only pay minimum wage, chances are you can't afford an illustrator with a master's degree, so you may have to eliminate that quality. Although not as important as education and experience, you will probably want to hire someone whose work ethic complements yours.

Once you have an idea of the type of person you would like to hire, you can begin looking for them. First place an ad in the Classified section of the local paper. For the best possible outcome, consider running it for a week. Post the opening in other publications, such as the church bulletin, and don't forget to check with your friends and business associates for candidates. They may know of someone who would be just perfect for the job.

If you have access to the Internet, take a look at the many employment Web sites. Post the opening or peruse through the resumes that have been posted. Inform the local unemployment office of the opening. If experience isn't important, contact the nearest college placement office and ask for a list of graduates who meet your qualifications. If money is an issue, consider enrolling in the college's internship program. In exchange for college credits and experience, an intern may be assigned to work for you for a specified period of time. However, because they are so inexperienced, you may have to provide them with more guidance.

Finding the right employee often takes time, so be prepared. If you need someone right away, you may have to make some sacrifices. Instead of hiring that seasoned office manager who can't start for another month, for example, you may have to settle for that somewhat green office manager who can start right away. It's up to you to decide who best meets your needs.

As you continue your search, keep in mind that the best employees aren't always the most qualified or the most experienced. Sometimes all you need is that one dependable person who is willing to work hard and add to their skill set as necessary.

Sell That Experience: Jobs For Veterans

BY SAM ERICKSON

The employment rate for returning vets has chronically lagged behind the general unemployment rate. Some employers are leery of hiring veterans because of a fear of emotional or physical disabilities, but a long history of successful transitions demonstrates that those fears are unfounded. As a veteran, you may have some special hurdles to overcome as you search for work, but there are strategies you can follow to be successful.

Some employers may take note of your military service without seeing its relevance to the position they are trying to fill. As a veteran, you may have to convince an employer of the applicability of your skill set to the position by playing up the skills you acquired while serving in the military. For example, in all branches of the military, people have to learn to work as a member of a team. You can use this to prove to an employer that you can work well in a group setting, a quality highly prized in today's more cooperative learning environment.

A successful life in the military also requires attention to detail, whether you are maintaining military aircraft or filing paperwork. This skill is valued by employers in many fields. It demonstrates you can follow whatever procedures and processes may be in place. Adaptability is another key trait that employers value, and most members of the military have had to learn to adapt to changing conditions or responsibilities on the job. You can sell this to employers by talking about your ability to adapt to a changing job market, including rapidly changing technology.

One way to highlight your abilities for a job is to adopt a skills resume rather than a resume focused on a chronological job history. This puts your abilities—not your past employment—at the center of your job application. The key is to put yourself into the shoes of any employer and think about what they are looking for, matching your experience with those needs.

There are many resources available to help you match the skills you acquired during your military service with civilian jobs. Some employers are actively looking to hire veterans, in part to take advantage of tax credits created by the federal government. Job sites on the Internet can connect you to these employers in your area.

There are many different ways to go about getting a job, and it can be difficult for veterans to overcome an inherent bias, but by focusing on the successes you have had in the past, you can sell your experience and yourself and be successful in your job search. Like anything else, confidence and preparation are essential to success—in a mission or in a job search.

Whether you're a first-time job hunter or someone who's been down the road before, one of the most important assets you need are good references. A good reference can mean the difference between being on the fast track to a job or getting the "We're sorry, but you're just not what we're looking for. We'll keep your resume on file and give you a call if anything comes up."

In most cases, employers want at least three letters of recommendation. When thinking about individuals to ask for letters, choose ones that can best answer questions relating to your work style and ethic, give examples of your accomplishments and describe any specials skills you have. Supervisors, coworkers, colleagues and outside sources such as vendors or customers are good choices. They can confirm you worked there, what your title was and why you left, among other things. You can also ask business acquaintances or professors, especially if you just graduated. If you do any volunteer work, you could ask other members or the head of the organization. They can address factors such as how you interact with others and handle things outside of the office. If asking for letters from anyone in your current position, it is a good idea to request them after you have given notice and at least two weeks before you leave.

Once you've decided on the individuals you want to write you a letter of recommendation, you must ask them. Do so with care. Don't just go up to them and ask for a letter of recommendation. Do a little detective work and make sure they feel comfortable with the idea. Perhaps they don't feel they know you well enough or can speak to your abilities. Should they turn you down, don't get mad. There could be any number of reasons they said no. Supply anyone who agrees to write you a letter with a current copy of your resume and a description of the job you are applying for. Ask your references to address specific skills in their letter, such as your personality and skills at work or your planning abilities.

Keep your references in the loop as to how the job

It's not hard to ask for letters of recommendation. It's just a matter of choosing someone who will give you a good one, which in turn can help put you on the short list to the job you want. Choose wisely.

Options In Information Technology

(NAPS)

If you or someone you care about is contemplating a first or new career, here's something to think about: Information technology (IT) is deeply embedded in virtually every industry.

More than ever, employers seek technology workers who think strategically, communicate effectively and possess strong business fundamentals.

A job in technology can mean a rewarding, well-paying career that lets you combine an interest in tech with another field: health care, education, government, finance, entertainment, sports or dozens of other industries.

Here are just a few of the tech jobs that are in high demand:

• Network Administrators are responsible for maintaining a reliable, secure and efficient data communications network. This typically includes a local area network (LAN), wide area network (WAN), intranet and Internet that organizations rely on to communicate, share, store and process information.

• Information Security Architects plan and carry involves analysis and planning to meet business needs within budget guidelines.

• Mobile App Developers work in video game studios; advertising and marketing shops; media firms looking for new ways to distribute their content; and government agencies, financial institutions, health care concerns, retailers and others that want to deliver information, products and services to mobile users.

• Software Engineers develop, test, maintain, support and upgrade the software solutions used by an organization. Medical, industrial, military, communications, aerospace, business, scientific, and general computing and technology are just a few of the industries with high demand for software engineers.

To help you see whether the IT workforce is for you, there's a free, interactive career road map. It can help job seekers identify career paths in a variety of tech disciplines and it's available from CompTIA, a nonprofit association for the IT industry. The association also offers CompTIA IT Fundamentals, a credential that covers a range of IT topics and provides a solid grounding in the You have been a workingwoman in the home long enough. You are ready to return to work outside of the home. There's just one small glitch in your plan-you haven't worked outside the home for years. That terrifies you a great deal. Take a deep breath, relax and read on for more information to get over the hump.

Most women returning to the workforce generally fall into two categories: seniors who need to go back for financial reasons and mothers whose children are in school all day. The preparation of each of these groups of women for returning to work differs somewhat.

Older women returning to the workforce often have to contend with stereotypes. Employers may believe they will be less productive because of their age, less flexible in their way of thinking and out of touch with the latest technology. If you are in this category, make sure you are aware of these stereotypes and the reasons you want to go back to work, especially if they aren't financial. Potential employers may not look highly on candidates who are returning to work out of boredom or an empty nest. You need to project your earnestness and willingness to give 110% to potential employees.

Although you're a senior, keep in mind that in all likelihood you will be starting at the bottom of the ladder. Don't go into a job interview throwing around a lot of suggestions. You don't want to undermine the interviewer and lose out on the job.

Mothers returning to work may want to consider part-time jobs or positions with a reduced hours capacity. This will give them more time to balance home and work. If you fall into this category, make sure you keep all professional organization memberships current so you know what is happening in the industry. Look for family friendly employers and study their policies before applying for any positions. Although it is against the law for employers to ask questions regarding childcare, that doesn't mean they won't be thinking about it. Find some way to let potential employers know that arrangements for childcare have been made. This will show them you are serious about working and won't be taking off at the slightest little thing. Regardless of your age, there are some steps you can take to make the transition from home back into the workforce go more smoothly. These include: • Talking to women who have been in your situation and finding out what they did to prepare themselves and get the positions they wanted.

out security measures to protect an organization's computer networks and systems.

Résumé Mistakes To Avoid

(NAPS)

For your résumé to stand out in a good way, avoid these common blunders:

• Typos: Spelling, grammar, and punctuation errors tell the reader you don't care. If you can't bother to proofread your résumé, why should someone bother to hire you? You may make mistakes without even realizing it, so filter your résumé through a professional editing service.

• Sassy_chick_69@hotmail. com: No. Get a respectable account.

• Buzzwords: Motivated, team leader, results-oriented, proven track record.... Too many adjectives looks like you're overcompensating for a lack of real skills.

• Weird hobbies: Employers like to see that you have passion, but the charity you support may be a better example than the Civil War re-enactment troupe you lead.

It's worth the extra effort to put together an error-free

• Joining a professional organization to gain access to a network of professionals in your field (some of whom may even have been in a situation similar to yours).

• Hiring a career coach to help you determine what jobs you are suited for, what your current strengths and skills are, if you need additional training, etc.

• Updating your resume and filling in employment gaps with any involvement in community activities and organizations.

• Familiarizing yourself with the computer systems being used in the industry and getting additional training if needed.

• Brushing up on your interviewing skills so you can ask good questions, provide good responses, and stand apart from the crowd.

• Researching the company before an interview to show that you have done your homework.

As a way to ease back into the workforce, you might want to consider signing up at a temp agency. In many cases, the jobs will offer more flexible hours but still provide you with the experience you need, which could lead to a full-time position.

Regardless of your situation, don't let fear keep you from rejoining the workforce. You aren't the first person to experience these feelings and you won't be the last. Just think of what you will gain by jumping back into the workforce.

IT Innovation Is Creating Career Opportunities

(NAPS)

Technology is a driving force in today's economy, powering innovation and creating jobs. The rapid adoption of cloud computing, mobility, social media and other innovations has accelerated the importance of technology in the workplace—and the need for information technology (IT) technicians.

Desktop support has long been one of the most fundamental jobs in all of IT. However, what was once a reactive job—waiting for the phone to ring or an e-mail to arrive summoning you to fix a broken PC—has evolved into a proactive position that's far more critical to dayto-day business operations.

MORE THAN MAINTENANCE

Technology "maintenance" is much more sophisticated in 2015 than it was 20, 10 or even two years ago. Today, it involves supporting handheld devices (iPads and Androids), rolling out software to thousands of computers and conducting server migrations. Today's IT technicians get hands-on experience and insight into fast-changing technologies, including cloud computing, cyber security, data analysis, mobility and telecommunications.

There remains in some corners a misperception that the majority of IT support jobs have been shipped overseas. The reality is that in many organizations, there are new, more significant opportunities for technicians. And the IT technician's role remains the best, first step someone can take to launch a career in technology.

KNOWLEDGE WORKERS

Today's engineers and technologists are knowledge workers, possessing a unique combination of skills that can't be easily outsourced or delegated.

With IT departments becoming more closely integrated with other lines of business, the technical knowledge and skills employed by IT technicians are something that can't be delivered efficiently or effectively over the phone from a call center.

IS IT RIGHT FOR YOU?

If you have an interest in technology, along with the ability to solve problems and possess strong people skills, you may be a candidate for a career change and step into a job as an IT technician with a minimal amount of training—either in a classroom, online or through self-study.

through self-study. One way to tell if you have the aptitude is the CompTIA IT Fundamentals certification. This professional credential is available through CompTIA, the nonprofit association for the IT industry. The exam covers five categories: software, hardware, security, networking and basic IT literacy.

Earning a credential from an organization well known and widely respected for its certification program demonstrates to prospective employers that you're ready to enter the IT workforce. It can also serve as a springboard to more advanced IT skills certifications and set the stage for new career opportunities and advancement.
